FAULTY BASE RUNNING. Cleveland Defeated the Senators Because of Bad Coaching.

The Spiders won yesterday afternoon first, occause the Senators ran bases like amateurs secondly, because of bad judgment in not walting at the bat, and thirdly, because the visitors hit opportunely. Petty was in the box for Cleveland, and had the locals waited many more of them would have gone to bases on balls. He was succeeded in the seventh by Cuppy, just about the time the Washingtons began to realize the importance of pulling themselves together.

Selbach and Abbey made wonderful catches in the eighth inning and their work was regarded as having won the game, but in the garded as naving won the game, but in the ninth Tebeau made a three-bagger with Mc-Kean on first, and he was followed with a single by McGarr, and the Spiders had one run to the good with but one man out. In the third inning Radford and Mercer singled. Petry hit Shiebeck and Dugdale went to first on balls. Tebeau made an error and the Senators had two runs when the maing closed.

Mercer's safe hit in the seventh, Cart-wright's double, Shiebeck being hit by the pitcher, Dugdale's base on balls, Hassamer's double and McGuire's single resulted in bringing the locals' score up to eight runs ey had it safe, but they failed to score after The visitors found Mercer in the first inning. Burkett hit safely and scored on Mc-Kean's home-run drive, McGarr's triple and McGuire's failure to hold Shiebeck's assist McGuire's failure to hold Shiebeck's assist scored a run in the fourth.

In the sixth O. Tebeau's triple, Shiebeck's error and singles by G. Tebeau, and McAleer scored two runs. The seventh was a repeater, Cuppy hitting for a double, Burkett and McKean for singles and McGarra double. The visitors won in the ninth as described.

EDGERLY GOES TO LAW. .

He Sues the General Manager and Edito of the Washington News for Criminal and Civil Libel.

Agreeably with his promise Prof. Albert Webster Edgerly, of Martyn College of Elocution and Oratory, has instituted criminal and civil libel proceedings against the Washington News.

Edgerly procured from Warrant Clerk Washburn, of the police court, warrants for the arrest of R. B. Gelatt, general manager, the arrest of R. B. Gelatt, general manager, and Charles Mackey Rippey, editor of the News, upon the charge of criminal libel.

The accused appeared yesterday before Assistant District Attorney Fugh in response to a verbal notification that the warrants had been issued, intending to offer bail, but they were informed that it could be given to-day, when J. G. Slater will act as surety for their appearance for preliminary hearing in the police court at a day to be set. Edgerly has, as already stated in Thr. Thirs. rotained E.

police court at a day to be set. Edgerly has, as already stated in The Thes, retained E. B. Hay, who is a member of the faculty of the college, as his counsel.

Meantime, the former pupils of the college, who held the public indignation meeting in June last, are prosecuting with the aid of a detective, a vigliant inquiry into Edgerly's past life. In the course of his quest the detective has, in the past few weeks, visited every city in which Edgerly is believed to have resided. It is said that a vast amount of documentary evidence has been secured, which will be used against Edgerly whenever an opportunity is afforded. The ex-pupils are very bitter used against Edgerly whenever an opportun-ity is afforded. The ex-pupils are very bitter in their denunciations of their former precep-ter in the dramatic art, and they, individually and collectively, assert their intention to strew with thoras his path in Washington, They expect to hold another meeting in the near future, and Edgerly will be invited to attend for the purpose of making capities are

Edgerly's father-in-law is said to have taken a band in the matter and is lend-ing the pupils all the aid in his power. His motive is said to be the disobedience of his daughter in marrying Edgerly, to whom he was violently opposed. The father-in-law has, it is said, paid the detective for his work

EDITOR TIMES: The address of Comptroller Eck els to the New York State Bankers' Associatio alludes to defects in the monetary laws and grievances between the law-makers and the power at the disposal of the Secretary of State, but the Comptroller does not formulate a propa-ganda that would deal with the business of bank-ing on the question of currency for a great na-ing on the question of currency for a great nation.

The following incidental version of part of the English system of banking may be of interest at this period. Therefore for our subject iet us deal with a producer, who, with capital and credit, obtains possession of a property-producing crop, cattle, or coal:

This producer in Great Britain goes to the nearest bank—it may be that he is solicited to go—and readily obtains a credit en his note of hand, which bears a revenue stamp, promising to pay at a given date. This note of hand is discounted by the banker at a slight advance on the Bank of England rate and probably redisthe Bank of England rate and probably redis-

the Bank of England rate and probably redis-counted by a financial house.

The crops, cattle or coal in time pass into the hands of others (say dealers), probably on note of hand, which the producer's hanker discounts and probably rediscounts. The dealer probably sells on note of hand, which his banker dis-counts and probably re-discounts, so that until the product actually reaches the consumer the probabilities are no metallic money has passed. Consequently a stack of hay or coal worth nominally $1,000, with the ramifications of inter-trade and credit, may on note of hand represent $10,000, or even $20,000 in manufac-tured articles, the banker making a profit or each transaction.

The English bankers discount paper with depositors money and not with capital. Take the balance sheet of one bank, say the London and Westminster. That bank holds current and deposit accounts representing $12.08.380, whereas the cash they hold in hand only represents $25.28.385, the difference being absorbed in circulation under discount and rediscount, and this accounts for the enormous volume of banking business that presents itself daily in Great Britain, which enables that country to encompass so much finance on a gold standard. It is the note of hand with the revenue stamp on the face of it That DOES THE TRICK.

Maryland's Governor Offers to Conditionally Pardon the Coxevites-Another

Camp at Hvattsville. At the request of Gov. Brown, of Maryland, J. H. Ralston, who appears as counsel for the Coxey men imprisoned in the Maryland house of correction in the habeas corpus proceedings for their release, together with N. A. Dunning and Congressman Baen, of Minnesota, met the Governor at the Hotel

Rennert, in Baltimore, yesterday evening. They held a long conversation relative to the disposition to be made of the prisoners. the disposition to be made of the prisoners. The following memorandum of the conversation was made by Mr. Raiston, and, if assented to by Gov. Brown, Mr. Raiston is to dismiss the suit as to all represented by the petition, except C. T. McKee and Christopher Columbus Jones, which dismissal is to be without prejudice to any other action at any time they or any of them may bring arising out of the state of facts detailed in the petition.

Gov. Brown is then to pardon at once as many of those with reference to whom such action is dismissed as shall accept such pardon, on condition that they at once depart from the State, and at the same time to fur-from the State, and at the same time to furnish them such transportation as he can secure for them to take them beyond the limits of this State and to such points as he can conveniently send them.

Attorney General Pope was present and participated in the discussion with Gov. Brown. The trial of Jones and McKee is set for next Monday at Mariboro'.

Twenty-five other Coxeyites have gone into camp near Bladensburg, having made a contract with Mr. Dorr for possession of a piece of ground suitable for their purposes. The camp is in charge of "Colonel" Blondell. Constable Barr, of Hyattsville, went out to the camp to disperse the men yesterday, but it is said that he abandoned the intention when shown the contract under which they held possession.

While at the camp the constable drew his revolver for some purpose, it is said with the intention of frightening the campers, and the weapon was accidentally exploded, severely injuring the officer's hand.

About twenty-five citizens held a "meeting of sympathy," at which there was considerable oratory and a "collection" amounting to $2.10, at Rechabite Hall, last night, for the purpose of taking steps to secure the release of the imprisoned "wealers. John D. Gill, Mr. Bullock, A. S. Dalin, Mrs. Belt, and others participated in the speech making. The meeting was adjourned at 9 o'clock to meet again next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock and at the same place.

The Senate has agreed to the conference re-ort on the bill to open and widen alleys. Senator Harris yesterday referred Senator Hoar's resolution for an inquiry into all charities receiving government aid to the sub-committee appointed to examine into the board of children's guardians, thus making one general inquiry into local charities.

The Senate District Committee held no meeting yesterday owing to the lack of a quorum. It is announced, therefore, that there will be no more District legislation or committee meetings this session, unless bills on the calendar are called up. It was stated at both Senate and House committee-rooms that there was no probability of calling up-any of these bills.

GARDNER WRITES A LETTER

understook that the business of the company had improved; that there had been a reduction from a debt of $50,000 ast year to ceath losses this year of $17,000.

Mr. Ball thought the committee could very safely advise the shekholders not to touch the new policies offered to them. The indications, he said, were that the Alliance was not sound.

The chairman reported on behalf of Mr. Browning that the committee ought to take some positive and affirmative action; for instance, that "it is the sense of this committee that the Endowment Association is still in existence, and that we advise the policy-holders to continue to pay their assessments.

Mr. Mackey was opposed to making such leclarations, as they involved questions of law that had been remitted to the company's ttorney. He thought it would be throwing money away to pay it into the coffers of the Endowment Association until it was shown money away to pay it into the collers of the Endowment Association until it was shown there was a chance of getting something back. Mr. Miller then took the floor and made some interesting statements and especially when taken in connection with the fact of the al-leged sudden and mysterious dissolution and eged sudden and mysterious dissolution. He ale of the association by Mr. Gardner. He

"I have taken a great deal of interest in this matter and I regret that the president is not present. I have known him for several years. I have always regarded him as an honorable gentleman in every sense of the term, but I think it is a duty he owes to this term, but I think it is a duty he owes to this committee, appointed by 475 policy holders, that he should have been here to explain this unfortunate affair. There will be none to do him more honor than I if things turn out all right, but otherwise no one will condemn him more. I wish to say that a gentleman connected with the Commercial Alliance called nected with the Commercial Alliance called upon me to-day (the vice president). The conversation was on the form of the new policy, and he expects in a few days to give us further information and a better policy when he gets home. He desired to know if he satisfied this committee beyond controversy that the New York company was in first-class financial condition, whether it would be likely we would go in. I told him that depended on circumstances. I expect to hear from him in a day or two."

This, by the way, looks like an offer of compliantion. Mr. Miller then paid his respects to Mr. Gardner's letter.

spects to Mr. Gardner's letter.
"Now, I have listened with great attention to the remarks of the various gentlemen, to Mr. Garener's circular letter, and to his letter read to-day. It appears that on the 31st day of December, 1893, Mr. Gardner showed day of December, 1883, Mr. Gardner showed that he had, by returns flied in the office of the recorder of deeds, capital stock said up, $20,000; assets, $89,988.77, and habilities, $39,371.75.

GARDNER THOUGHT IT SOLVENT "I understand that he says that the appraised valuation of the real estate at $19,-554.68, is below the market value and that it should be twice that amount. That would make the assets $108,988, and the liabilities make the assets $108,388, and the manning $39,371, leaving still assets to the amount of $69,617, besides various amounts which have been collected from the certificate-holders from that time up to the present when he transferred the company. All this shows that Mr. Gardner thought the company perfectly solvent.

"I think it was his duty to be here this afternoon. He says that we invited other gentlemen, but extended none to him. I ertainly thought an invitation would have seen extended to all connected with the matter."

The chairman: "We certainly would have been most happy to have had him. We are interested in him. He could give us just as fair a statement as he could to the press. We would like to know from him whether we can would like to know from him whether we can have possession of the books so as to com-pare what we get there with his statement when published. If I understand my in-formant correctly Mr. Gardner is willing to give us any statement that is contained in the books we ask for, but is unwilling to let the books go out of his hands. I would more, therefore that our committee of expert acbooks go out of his hands. I would move, therefore, that our committee of expert accountants call upon Mr. Gardner with the request that they be allowed to examine the book." Action on this was deferred.

At this point Mr. Browning explained that he did not make an effort to see Mr. Gardner on the day that he had invited the directors to the meeting. Mr. Mackey and that it was to the meeting. Mr. Mackey said that it was a mistake not to have had before them "a man who had been condemned by the direc-man who had been contember by the tors."

Right here Mr. Wolf repeated almost verbatim, evidently, what took place between him and Mr. Gardner on Thursday night at the Shoreham. It is interesting as it outlines in a certain place Mr. Gardner's defence, and is otherwise good reading.

Mr. Wolf said: "I saw him last night, and he promised to be present to-day. He said he didn't know of any reason, unless he changed his mind, why he should not be present. I waited all day and not hearing from him I. wanted an day, and not hearing from him I took it for granted that he wouldn't be here. I think I stayed with him nearly an hour, Col. Tracy, an intimate friend of him and me, being present. Mr. Gardner had been with the vice-president of the committee of the waited all day, and not hearing from him I the vice-president of the committee of the Commercial Alliance, I said to him that having heard the statements made before the meeting and the committee such statements ought to be corrected or denied if they were not true.

WOULD NOT GIVE UP THE BOOKS. "I told him that Director Edson had been to see me during the day, and I told him about the interview at Somerville's house, He said that there must have been some mis understanding, for he (Gardner) would cer-tainly not give up the books. We could ask for a statement, and when made he would allow the experts to compare it with the books, but he would not allow a regular inbooks, but he would not allow a regular investigation into the books and papers of the office. He also atated positively, if he didn't come, it would be either from the fact that he was advised not to come, or because he did not wish to have personal controversy agd altercation with one or two members of the committee who, as he said, had 'villified him publicly.' I assured him that he would be just as safe here as in his own bome. That I, as president, would protect him; that I would allow no insults to pass, and that no one of the committee would indulge in anything of the kind if he wouldn't forget himself. He said that an attempt had been made to make a kind if he wouldn't forget himself. He said that an attempt had been made to make a scapegoat of him, but that if we waited long enough we would see that if there was any-thing to blame in the matter it would not at-tach to him alone." This last chause was greeted with smiles by the committee.

"Mr. Gardner said that he didn't know

"Mr. Gardmer said that he didn't know why this controversy arose. It was a stock concern. He had investigated the matter. He had gone to New York. He thought the Commercial Alliance a bona fide concern. That for a year he had been nearly crazy with this thing. He didn't care a snap for his stock. That he was a friend of this people. He had acted honorably and manfully in the matter, and he wouldn't allow any man or set of men to place him in the position of having his motives impugned and assailed, because he had done nothing except what circumstances justified.

HE WAS WILLING TO AID.

HE WAS WILLING TO AID. "I asked him whether he couldn't bring back the corporation to the status before the alleged transfer. He said he didn't know, but was willing to aid in that direction if anything could be done. If anybody was willing to assume the liabilities he was willing that it should be done, and he saw no reason why it couldn't be done except that it was too late. I said it could be done. He said he would consult with the Commercial Alliance and think the matter over. At the conclusion of the talk he said: 'Well, I see no reason why I should not be present at your meeting to-morrow.''

After this statement the motion to have the experts examine the books was withdrawn.

Mr. Mackey offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that it would be inadvisable for the certificate holders of the Endowment Association to accept at present the offer of the Commercial Alliance Life Insurance Company of New York." but was willing to aid in that direction i Look on the third page and read about the prizes for close guesses on the adjournment of the House of Representatives.

Mr. Wolf then made a personal explanation. He said he noticed that an officer of the Alliance hair intimated that he (Wolf) was acting in the matter as an insurance man, and not really in the interest of the association, or at least that was to be inferred from that officers

This information will be obtained by the committee of experts. On motion, the committee adjourned to meet subject to the call of the chairman.

of the chairman. UNDER A CLOUD. At the place of meeting, but not during the session of the committee, an article from the New York Chronicle was circulated and read. This article, substantially, expresses surprise that the Washington Beneficial Endowment Association should have permitted itself to "be taken in" by the Commercial Alliance Life Insurance Company, of New York. The article asks the New York superneedent of insurance if he knew what he is doing when he allowed this concern to "reinsure anything." It is also stated that "the superintendent's department is making a wretched exhibition of itself in withholding its special report on the condition of the company."

This publication from a reputable journal is taken as evidence by the Endowment people to mean that the Commercial Alliance is being investigated specially and that that fact leaves it under a cloud.

White of the committee of ex-fact leaves it under a cloud.

Chairman White, of the committee of expert accountants, has the official report for '93-'94, of the superintendent of insurance of New York, showing the business done by the Commercial Alliance in 1892 and 1893. The figures show that in one year $4,000,000 in insurance was withdrawn from the company and that there was a decrease in the surplus rom $64,000 to $24,000.
